All additional researchers need to complete sections 1, 6, 7 and 9 only, referring to the joint proposal and (if already known) provide the project ID in 1.3. Please tick the following box if you are not the lead researcher and therefore only have to complete the selected sections listed above: ☐

In any case, you also need to provide the documents requested in section 10 below. Please send the completed application form together with the other documents required, to fdsz-data@bundesbank.de

Once your application has been accepted by the Deutsche Bundesbank, you must sign and submit the certification document to the following address:

Wealth, Migration & Retirement Sustainability in Germany: Dynamic Microsimulation and Econometric Pol

2.2 Description of the planned research project

Please describe the subject of the proposed research, the purpose of the research, the possible methodology, and why the data are relevant and needed for the research subject. As guidance, around 200 words are expected.

This academic research project investigates household wealth accumulation, portfolio composition, and retirement income security across demographic and migration-related groups in Germany.

While statutory pension entitlements (GRV) reflect pension insurance histories, private household wealth can provide an additional buffer against old-age poverty. Aggregate statistics may conceal substantial differences in wealth holdings and asset composition across households.

Using Panel on Household Finances (PHF) microdata, subject to variable availability, this study examines:

1. Household net wealth distributions, including liquid financial assets, investment portfolios, owner-occupied housing equity, and liabilities.
2. Differences in wealth composition across age groups, survey waves, and identifiable migration-related groups.
3. Calibration of a dynamic microsimulation framework (2025–2070) to evaluate private wealth as a complement to statutory pensions and its potential role in mitigating old-age poverty and interactions with means-tested social assistance (Grundsicherung im Alter, SGB XII).

PHF data will be analysed independently of pension and migration datasets from other institutions. Findings will be compared at appropriate aggregate or subgroup levels, without assuming individual-level linkage. Household-level wealth measures will be distinguished from modelled individual retirement outcomes.

Cristhian David Caceres Mateus

hereinafter 'the Researcher', hereby declares in relation to a request for access to the Panel on Household Finances (PHF) 'research dataset' (hereinafter the 'data') and any subsequent use of the information contained in the data supplied by the Deutsche Bundesbank that he/she undertakes to abide by the following obligations:

1. The Researcher requesting access to the data acknowledges that the data, including any copy or parts thereof containing information which is based on data collected from households and/or individual-level information derived from the data are confidential and proprietary to the Deutsche Bundesbank.

The data is provided in de facto anonymised form and, hence, is no personal data. De-anonymisation of the data is prohibited. The Researcher shall refrain from any attempt to de-anonymise the data and shall not combine the data with other databases containing information on individual households or persons with that aim in mind.

Despite the fact that, due to their sensitive nature, the data have been anonymised, they may not be used by any unauthorised persons (meaning any third party other than those to whom the Deutsche Bundesbank has explicitly authorised the Researcher to grant access to the anonymised data).

The Researcher agrees to ensure the confidentiality of the data using the security safeguards described in section 6 of the application and not to divulge the data to any unauthorised persons.

The Researcher agrees not to use the data for any purpose other than for the scientific purposes mentioned in the research proposal submitted in the access request attached to this confidentiality commitment (the 'application') nor in support of measures or decisions concerning any particular individual, household, economic entity or other undertaking.

The Researcher agrees not to disclose or otherwise employ the data for commercial purposes.

The Researcher agrees not to duplicate, transfer, disclose, publish or otherwise reveal the data to any third party in the absence of express authorization by the Deutsche Bundesbank.

2. The Researcher shall mention the source of the data in any publication including, in particular, tables and charts compiled on the basis of the data. The data source shall be cited as: 'Deutsche Bundesbank Panel on Household Finances'. In addition, an acknowledgement must be included in the following form: 'This paper uses data from the Deutsche Bundesbank Panel on Household Finances. The Researcher shall send a copy of his/her research work based on the data to the Bundesbank by e-mail to: fdsz-data@bundesbank.de

3. The Researcher shall implement appropriate technical, organisational and administrative measures (details of which are included in the application) to prevent:
 - a. any accidental disclosure of the data to any third party, any accidental access to the data by any third party, and any accidental loss or alteration of the data, and
 - b. any unlawful disclosure of the data to any third party, any unlawful access to the data by any third party, and all other unlawful forms of processing.
4. The Researcher understands that any contravention of the abovementioned obligations:
 - a. may be reported by the Deutsche Bundesbank to the competent authorities,
 - b. may be subject to prosecution under the applicable law and result in civil and/or criminal liability, and
 - c. will result in an obligation to destroy the data.
5. The Researcher assumes full and exclusive responsibility for the use of the data.

A change in circumstances such as a change of research department or unit or termination of the affiliation relationship referred to in the application shall not constitute a valid cause for termination of this commitment. Notwithstanding any termination of this commitment, the obligation to keep confidential all information obtained in the course of using the data shall also remain valid after that date.

If the Researcher discloses the data or has failed to take appropriate measures to restrict access to the data, for each breach for which the Researcher is responsible, the Deutsche Bundesbank may impose a penalty on the Researcher to an amount not exceeding EUR 10000. Within that limit, the Deutsche Bundesbank shall determine the amount payable using its equitable discretion taking into account the seriousness of the breach and the damage caused to the Deutsche Bundesbank. Imposition of this penalty shall not prevent the Deutsche Bundesbank from claiming further damages or taking other legal measures. The Researcher hereby agrees to discharge any penalty within three weeks of the date on which it was imposed.
